

Alessia Chiriatti is a researcher within the IAI's Educational programme. She is also research fellow in Political Sciences and International Relations at the University for Foreigners of Perugia, where she obtained, in 2014, the PhD with a thesis on Turkish foreign policy in Syria and Georgia. She is member of the International Advisory Board of Novus Orbis: Journal of Politics and International Relations. Her research interests focus on Turkish foreign policy, Security studies, Regional studies and Learning mechanism in International Relations.

From her publications:

“NGOs and Humanitarian Diplomacy: The Case of IHH (Humanitarian Relief Foundation)”, in Quaderni di Scienze Politiche, a. 8, n. 14/2018, p. 39-57

“Enemies at the Doors: Turkish Geographical Limitation and Its Dilemmas after the Syrian Civil War”, in Husrev Tabak, Ozgur Tufekci and Alessia Chiriatti (eds), Domestic and Regional Uncertainties in the New Turkey, Newcastle upon Tyne, Cambridge Scholars Publishing, 2017, p. 167-178

“Enemies at the doors: Turkish foreign policy between Syria and Georgia”, in Alessia Chiriatti et al., The Depth of Turkish Geopolitics in the AKP's Foreign Policy. From Europe to an Extended Neighbourhood, Perugia, Università per Stranieri di Perugia, 2014, p. 69-83

“Il declino della guerra nelle Relazioni Internazionali: il conflitto siriano e la tradizione realista”, in Alessandro Campi e Stefano De Luca (a cura di), Il realismo politico. Figure, concetti, prospettive di ricerca, Soveria Mannelli, Rubbettino, 2014, p. 941-955

“Quali risposte per il conflitto siriano? Una nuova sfida per l'Europa”, in Emilio Diodato e Federica Guazzini (a cura di), La

guerra ai confini d'Europa. Incognite e prospettive mediterranee per l'Italia, Roma, Carocci, 2014, p. 214-235

“Attori non-statali ed equilibri nel Caucaso: la criminalità organizzata in Abcasia e Ossezia del Sud e la scelta anti-isolazionista turca”, in Rivista di politica, n. 1/2014, p. 105-115