

David Doyle

I am an Associate Professor of Politics in the Department of Politics and International Relations at the University of Oxford, and a Fellow of St Hugh's College. I am a member of the Latin American Centre.

My general research and teaching interests include comparative politics and comparative political economy. I am currently working on a number of projects. These include a project on taxation and tax morale in Latin America and a project on the political effect of migrant remittances.

I am an Associate Editor of Oxford Development Studies and as of January 2019, I will be on the editorial board of the Journal of Latin American Studies. For the last five years, I was a regular contributor to the blog Presidential Power on news and issues related to Latin America and I was also the co-convenor of the ECPR Standing Group on Latin American Politics.

My research has appeared in journals such as the American Political Science Review, the Journal of Politics, the British Journal of Political Science and Comparative Political Studies, among others.